The Advisory Committee on Student Financial Assistance will host a national roundtable discussion focused on ways to ensure access to college for low- and middle-income students. Issues addressed will include:

- How will the subprime credit crisis and worsening economic conditions affect access to and persistence in college?
- How might current demographic trends exacerbate the impact?
- How will student aid of all types from all sources be affected?
- What will be the impact on institutional financing, state appropriations, and charitable giving?
- Are recently planned solutions likely to be adequate?
- What additional steps must be taken at the federal, state, and institutional levels?

A detailed agenda and complete list of participants will be available in early May.
